Dear Andy,

Last night, I woke at 4:00 a.m. thinking about your work with Project Pegasus and how important it is to human development and planetary survival. Naturally, my thoughts also turned to Norman Cousins and his "Celebration of Life" credo, which is enclosed in two documents.

Most people who knew Norman did not understand the great lengths to which he went to move humankind in the right direction. Sometimes, his work involved heroic efforts which were literally life-threatening. I am thinking specifically about an instance when Norman was meeting with Yasser Arafat while the PLO headquarters was actually being attacked with machine guns and other killing devices.

In thinking about your Project, I am aware that you, too, are engaged in one of the most heroic and difficult projects in human history (and future). My list of heroes has been pretty short: Norman Cousins, Norman Thomas, Roger Baldwin, Kenneth Boulding, the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., Nelson Mandela, Dennis Kucinich, Theodore F. Lentz, and a handful of others. Given your intelligence, determination and courage, I certainly place you on that list of heroes. Your contribution to DISCLOSURE will change humankind in almost unbelievable ways.

If you have not looked at the "Celebration of Life" affirmations, take a minute to do so. They are so appropriate for your mission.

Sincerely,

Bill Wickersham
